FROM THE DIRECTOR

I'm not giving away any spoilers. We all know that "A tale as old as time" also has messages as old as time, as do all fairy tales. We have a message here too. Love can, given time, conquer all - if you go in with a pure heart, no perceived conceptions of how a person should be or act AND still be true to yourself and be strong enough to let that love be earned. Our Belle may come across as a little more feisty than the standard versions. But she is pure of heart and can (and will) take the time to find the true humanity within the beast (or her choice of beasts?).

At the same time, I wanted to show that she can be strong and find the love she has earned. To give her heart to the one that is worthy, because he earned that worth. Each of our characters feel the worth of that love and make it very real on stage. They show that you can fight the evil (either within or without), and bring love and light to bear on the darkness. Yet, it can still be a funny and very entertaining story!

This group of people proved that from the beginning. This cast came together to love and live the story with each other. We have had such a blast putting this show together for you. The cast has always been giving of themselves, working hard to get every little nuance of character right. They helped those who were younger or who haven't had as much experience, to learn about the art and magic of theater. EVERYONE showed their capability for being "Human Again". Trust me that allegory won't be lost on you when you hear the song, which is not part of the animated or live action versions but is in this Broadway version, and one of my top songs in the show.

Sometimes we have to fight for and stick up for what we believe in. Sometimes that is incredibly hard to do. But take a lesson from these folks in the cast and this story. People encompass many types along all the spectrums of humanity - we all deserve the love we earn. The cast and crew gave love the chance to conquer and be human again from beginning to the finished product you see now and I couldn't be more proud. All that said...get out those tissues...you will definitely need them. I know, because these folks made me shed more than a few tears of joy even during the rehearsal process.

Love and Peace,

Scott Olson
Director
