STERLING PLAYMAKERS

The Sterling Playmakers, in cooperation with Loudoun County Parks, Recreation, and Community Services' Sterling Community Center, will associate ourselves together for the following purposes:

To foster and perpetuate wholesome theatrical presentations for all age groups, of both a cultural and entertainment value to the community of Sterling, ever keeping in mind our obligations to the community in the safeguarding of the principles of good taste in all our endeavors.

To produce, direct, write, teach, stage and in all ways provide all forms of performing arts activities and events for children and adults and to hire such staff as may be necessary.

To exist as a non-profit organization, which operates strictly for the enjoyment of our members, providing an outlet for the artistic talents of as many community individuals as possible.

Director's Note

You see it at every audition everywhere. Lots of talented women auditioning and not quite enough parts. I've certainly been the beneficiary of the dearth of roles for men, but when the Playmakers wanted to highlight some classical works (a personal interest anyway), I started getting excited about different ways to highlight the talent there is hiding in our organization while featuring some of the fascinating roles for women in literature.

That's how we started off and I had no way of knowing how much I'd learn and how overwhelmed I'd be by the actresses who came out try their hands at classical drama.

I must submit a quick apology for narrowing our focus to Western literature. It became obvious very quickly that as overeducated as I might be, becoming an expert the fabulous females of world literature was beyond my capability during the time constraints. Please take it as a challenge when I say the roles presented on stage tonight are only the tip of the iceberg.

I hope you enjoy "The Bad Girls of Western Lit." They're tragic. They're hysterical. Sometimes they're even bawdy (although less so than when I started editing.) All together, they're not unlike the remarkable women that you'll see on stage tonight.

I'd be remiss without mentioning three special women who helped make this project possible. My lifelong friend Emily Pugh provided tremendous support in getting this project off this ground and our group mentor Kathleen Bleutge is the one who taught me to love the theatre. Lastly, I owe a debt to my mother who instilled in me an appreciation for literature – and for fearsome women.

It's been a wintery and cold production schedule. We also need to thank St. Matthews Episcopal Church and the Sterling Community Center. We could never had met our rehearsal schedule without them.
